

August Book Displays: We have a continuing mystery display of books, audiobooks, and DVDs to coincide with the Sherlock Holmes discussion series. August is Read-a-Romance month so we are displaying a collection of fictional and biographical romances by the information desk. Across from the circulation desk, there is a display of last minute good reads that you may want to grab on your way to the beach, trip, or a relaxing sojourn in your own backyards. Please check any of these out as our book displays are a way to encourage circulation.

Our ongoing glass case displays: On loan from the Norway Historical Society, we have a display of dance cards from the 1900s. It was a custom back then for ladies to pencil in their partners on these pretty dance cards. There were several dances held at the Norway Opera House for holidays and special occasions. The display includes copies of articles about the dresses worn and the history of dance cards. The other display is of beekeeping artifacts that have been generously loaned to us from Carol Cotrill, Secretary, of the Western Maine Beekeepers Association. This will be on display through the end of August in conjunction with our summer discussion novel, "The Beekeeper's Apprentice" by Laurie R. King.
